MOST RESEARCHERS FEEL THAT THERE IS AN EXPECTATION THAT GOOD RESEARCHERS ARE INTERNATIONALLY MOBILE

79% of researchers agree that there is an expectation of international mobility in the research community.

This is supported by the wider survey findings, such as the observation that career development is a key driver of mobility.

This is felt by a majority of respondents across genders, disciplines, types of institution, nationalities, and previous mobility experiences:

- 79% Men and women
- 68% Social sciences
- 84% Life sciences
- 74% PhDs
- 75% UK nationals
- 82% Non-UK nationals

Read more:
International mobility of researchers—a survey of researchers in the UK
Susan Guthrie, Catherine Lichten, Emma Harte, Sarah Parks and Steven Wooding