Are all daffodils the same?

STEM partner engagement

Who has helped with the project?

We worked with the James Hutton Institute, the University of Edinburgh (including a group exploring Bio-Sonification) and the Royal Botanic Garden Edinburgh. These STEM partners have shared expertise in plant science, genetics, and technology, helping us understand the wider potential of our research.

What support have the STEM partners provided?

Through guidance, visits and practical work, the STEM partners have brought expert knowledge, practical lab skills, and insight into STEM careers. The support has deepened the understanding of the full scientific process, from experimental design to data analysis. This connection has been inspiring and empowering.
