Fellowships for UK Post-Docs Accepted for Research Positions In Israel

Applications for the Israel Academy of Sciences and Humanities -- Royal Society Kohn International Postdoctoral Fellowships for two-year research positions at Israeli Universities, commencing in 2016 are currently being accepted.

By agreement between the Academy and the Royal Society, two-year fellowships will be granted annually to worthy UK researchers who have been accepted for two-year post-doctoral research positions at one of Israel's seven main universities (listed below). The post-doc fellowships granted in Israel under this program will be provided by the respective universities according to their procedures and will be consistent with the financial support policy of the particular host university. Those applicants found worthy will be granted an additional one-time relocation grant of £ 2,000 (paid in new Israeli shekels) by the Academy. (Information regarding the Royal Society's Kohn International Fellowships call for Israeli post-docs is available from the Royal Society's website www.royalsociety.org).

The statutes stipulate that the UK recipients shall be early career researchers who have already received the Ph.D. degree who plan to undertake research in Israel in a field within the physical, chemical and life sciences (excluding clinical sciences). Recipients of the fellowships are expected to reside in Israel for the two-year term of the fellowship.

Application by UK scientists should be made to the Israel Academy of Sciences and Humanities. The selection of recipients will be based on the merits of the candidates and their proposed programs. Application forms (including a list of required documents) and further information are available by request from: IASH-RS-Fellowships@academy.ac.il. The application form and supporting documentation, should be typed in English and submitted by October 29 2015, in a single email (with attachments) addressed to IASH-RS-Fellowships@academy.ac.il.
